PEMBROKE, March 4, 1873.

SCHOOL REPORT.

SCHOOL REPORT.

Citizens of the Town of Pembroke: Your Committee would respectfully submit the following report:—

Many of our schools are so small as to render it almost impossible to awaken that interest in them which ought to be secured, and would be if they were larger. In such cases money raised for educational purposes is expended at a great disadvantage.

Some of our school-houses are in a bad condition, not having been improved much during the past year.

Teachers should be a progressive class of persons, the very last to be excused from making new attainments in learning daily. Thus they will be prepared to interest and properly instruct their pupils, and take for themselves a higher and more useful stand in the work in which they are engaged. Teachers who do not make progress ought to know that they stand in the way of those who desire to keep up with the improvements of the day. Nothing is more pleasing to parents, than to see their children advancing in scholarly habits of an improved character; but teachers must be patterns in this respect, or the wished-for results are not obtained.

With two exceptions, our teachers have been residents of our own town, and most of them teachers of experience. This shows the wisdom of our prudential committees, for they might have "gone further and fared worse." In this, as in other cases, the motto should be, "Patronize home industry when it can be done successfully."

Parents and guardians should furnish their children with the most modern and improved text-books. By so doing, our schools will not fall behind those in other communities, nor fail to realize the best possible results. At the close of each term of our schools the past year, we are happy to say, the examinations have generally been well attended by parents and other friends, who have thereby manifested their interest in the schools, and also their approbation of our desires for their improvement. With one or two exceptions, good discipline has been maintained, and satisfactory progress been made. But to secure these desirable results, it will not do for any teacher to say, "I never struck a scholar in my life, and corporal punishment will not be inflicted in this school." Good order is indispensable, and until children are made of different materials than those which now enter into their composition, wholesome discipline must be enforced, if need be. Education is a necessity. But what is education, its spirit, its methods, its root idea? A philosopher of the day gives us the following definitions: "That which prepares for direct self-preservation; that which prepares for indirect self-preservation; that which prepares for parenthood; that which prepares for citizenship; that which prepares for the miscellaneous refinements of life." There is an obvious method in all this, beginning as it does with the laws of physical existence, and working up to the adornments of life.

Prudential committees should carefully exercise their judgment in selecting teachers; for those that would succeed well in one district might fail in another. It is not advisable to employ any teacher in opposition to the wishes of a strong minority; for it is virtually expelling scholars from school, in the benefits of which they are entitled to share. It is an old maxim, and a very good one, that "minorities have rights which majorities are bound to respect." Districts that are careful to choose prudential committees thoroughly interested in the education of the young, will almost universally have good teachers and good schools.

It will doubtless be well to make some changes in text-books soon, though none has been made the past year.

For statistics of the different schools, reference should be made to the table at the close of the report.

DISTRICT No. 1.

Prudential Committee, JACOB SAWYER.

Miss Knox, who had charge of this school during the summer, is a teacher of much experience, and her efforts were attended with good success. In her report she says: "My school has been very pleasant, and I trust the time has been profitably spent by nearly all the scholars."

Mr. Kimball, who taught in the winter, being well and favorably known, commenced the school with a larger number of scholars than usual, some of whom were his former associates. This rendered the government of the school more difficult than it otherwise would have been. Such being the circumstances, and this being Mr. Kimball's first attempt to teach young ideas how to shoot, the upshot of the whole matter was some collision, some dissatisfaction, and some falling off. And yet those who endured unto the end made good progress in their studies, and passed a very pleasant and successful examination.

DISTRICT No. 2.

Prudential Committee, D. W. MANN.

Miss Burt, who taught this school in the summer, says: "I commenced the school with the determination of making the term pass pleasantly and profitably to all. I have endeavored to interest my scholars in other exercises besides their usual lessons. With one or two exceptions, they have been obedient to the rules of the school, and their recitations have been as nearly perfect as could be expected." As this accords with our own observation, the school is to be regarded as eminently successful.

Miss Coburn, who taught this school in the winter, was amiable and pleasant, and seemed to take an interest in her scholars, — some of whom made considerable progress in their studies; but the disorder which prevailed caused many to leave early in the term, and others to fail of those good results which otherwise might have been obtained.

[DISTRICT No. 3.

Prudential Committee, CHARLES BLISS.

The discipline of this school was good. The great object of the teacher was, to have all lessons well learned and correctly recited. This was fully shown at the closing examinations. Miss Doe, who had charge of this school through the year, sustained her former high reputation as a teacher.

DISTRICT No. 4.

Prudential Committee, ISAAC N. LAKEMAN.

Miss Holt, in whose care this school was placed, both summer and winter, is a teacher of some experience, and of the progressive order. Her scholars were orderly and industrious, and a marked improvement was everywhere seen, especially in writing, which we should judge had been somewhat neglected in the past. The teacher was faithful, and the school a good one. This and District No. 5 will do well to consider the question of uniting in support of one school.

DISTRICT No. 5.

Prudential Committee, JOHN K. ROBINSON.

This school made good progress in all the branches taken up, and also made a good appearance at the closing examination.

Miss Robinson, who had charge of this school in the summer is an experienced teacher, and enjoys a high reputation as a scholar and disciplinarian.

Miss Ford, who taught the winter school is young in years, and a beginner in the art, and yet she succeeded finely. Order reigned in the school-room, and good improvement is made in all branches of study. The teacher was interested in her school, and beloved by her pupils.

DISTRICT No. 6.

Prudential Committee, WALDO LANCEY.

Miss Holt commenced this school without any experience as a teacher, but she gained the love and respect of her scholars, and by her unwearied efforts, much improvement was made. There was not, however, that discipline in the school which was desirable, and yet it appeared quite well at the close.

Miss Knox taught the winter term, and adopted as her motto, "Order is heaven's first law." When the scholars ascertained her intentions and her requirements, they cheerfully complied. Most of them labored hard and were prompt in their recitations. Five were not absent, and fifteen were neither tardy nor dismissed during the term. The school was well visited by parents and other friends. The closing exercises were lengthy, interesting, and attended by a full house. Miss Knox evidently sustained her previous reputation as a teacher.

Miss Gould, who taught this school both terms, is a fine scholar and a good teacher. The school made a good appearance, and we think the money well laid out. The number of scholars is small in this district, but they were quite punctual in their attendance. The winter term closed abruptly, and without an examination, as the teacher was obliged to leave at that time.

PRIMARY DEPARTMENT. — Miss Morrill taught the summer term in this department, and did herself much credit by the manner in which she discharged her duties. But no one without experience, can realize the patience and ingenuity requisite to interest and instruct a class so numerous and so young as attend this school from day to day.

Miss Robinson had charge of the school during the fall term and succeeded well in interesting this class of pupils. She gained their good will, and thus more easily kept them in order. By her untiring efforts, many of the little ones, who scarcely knew a singly letter of the alphabet at the beginning of the term, were able to form words and read short sentences, at the close.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT. — Miss Morgan has held the position of teacher in this department, for several years, with good success. She has the respect and good will of her scholars, and some have become so much attached to her, that they prefer to remain where they are, rather than leave her and go into the next department, for which they are already qualified. Considering the interruption occasioned by a change to another building, this school has sustained itself well.

ADVANCED DEPARTMENT. — The first session of this school was held in the "old school-house." The reins of government were firmly held, and good order prevailed. Promptness and thoroughness were required in all the recitations, which rendered the term quite successful. In consequence of changing the school to a less convenient room, the second term, the number of scholars was somewhat diminished. This gave those who did attend a better opportunity for study, while those who absented themselves sustained a loss which they will never regain. Miss Drake, the teacher, is worthy of commendation for the faithful manner in which she discharged her duties.

The people in this district have done themselves great credit in erecting a new and elegant school-house at a cost of some six thousand dollars. The building is two stories high, contains four departments, and is fitted up with many modern improvements. As some of the committees having charge of the work did not "come to time," the house was not in readiness for the winter schools, which consequently go over into the next season. We hope that the people in some other districts in town will visit and carefully examine this new house, and then go home and contrast it with their own.

DISTRICT No. 9.

Prudential Committee, JOHN MANN KIMBALL.

The attendance upon this school by a portion of the children in the district, was very imperfect, occasioned partly by the measles, and partly not by the measles. This is to be regretted, for otherwise the school was one of our very best.

The order was all that could be desired. Good improvement was everywhere seen; especially in reading, writing and spelling. No mumbling sounds were heard in the recitations, every utterance being clear and distinct. Mutual sympathy existed between the teacher and her pupils, and tokens of affection were exchanged at the close. The examinations were well attended and pleasantly interspersed with speaking and singing. Miss Goddard had charge of the school through the year.

From the foregoing review, it will be seen that our schools, the past year, have enjoyed their usual degree of prosperity. No serious calamity has befallen them. Here and there, it is true, a ripple has been seen upon the surface, but the deep waters have not been disturbed.

One prominent fault which we have observed is, a desire to pluck fruit from the higher branches of the tree of knowledge, instead of being contented with the more suitable within easy reach. Thus, the elementary studies are oftentimes neglected, while the more difficult are but imperfectly understood. "Make haste slowly," is a good motto. Review often; turn over every stone in your path, and see what is under it; leave Africa to Dr. Livingstone till you have explored your own country.

THE ACADEMY.

This venerable institution, which has done so much for the cause of education in times past, is taking a new lease of life, we trust, and entering upon a brighter career of prosperity. Mr. Walker, one of its former popular and successful principals, is again at its head. We bespeak for him the hearty good-will and faithful coöperation of the entire community. Let suitable provision be made for students by placing the price of board as low as possible, and making every house like an omnibus, always capable of taking in "one more."
